Evanced Brings New Level of Library Access and Convenience

Indianapolis, IN – April 28, 2009 – Imagine being able to provide library services 24 hours a day, seven days a week from anywhere in the community. The new GoLibrary from Evanced Solutions does just that for libraries, large and small. “GoLibrary offers a cost efficient way for libraries to increase service, access and convenience. In effect, it brings the library to the community,” said Todd Cutler, CEO and co-founder of Evanced.

GoLibrary is a revolutionary new form of library service – a completely automated library machine. It promises to do for libraries what the ATM did for banks. GoLibrary handles the complete process of storing books and other media, handling loans, accepting returns and performing basic administration functions. Library patrons access GoLibrary using their regular library card; the process is simple, quick and available any time, day or night, 365 days a year.

Through a distribution and service agreement with Distribution Technologies DISTEC AB, a Sweden-based company, Evanced is the exclusive reseller of GoLibrary products in the northeast region of the United States and will also be selling them throughout the country. “This is an exciting time for libraries as well as for our two companies,” said Christian Bjersér, DISTEC CEO, “We are elated to work with Evanced to provide the GoLibrary product in the United States.”

There are three GoLibrary models available now to meet particular needs. They include:

- GoLibrary Popular Materials – Allows for a mix of popular books, CDs and DVDs.
- GoLibrary Media – Specializes in DVD and CD media to offer a wide array of titles.
- GoLibrary Reservations – A totally automated reservation/holds system accessible 24/7.

While GoLibrary machines can be installed inside or outside library buildings, more importantly, they can also be installed at locations where a traditional library could not operate, such as shopping areas, schools, hospitals, offices, residential areas, airports and recreational/community centers. The possibilities are virtually endless.

“The GoLibrary products are another example of our desire to provide quality products to our customers as we strive to help libraries engage and connect to their communities and extend customer convenience and access, while also saving them time and money,” said Rob Cullin, Evanced co-founder and CSO. “We are excited about offering these solutions to help move libraries forward, enhance accessibility and improve service to library patrons,” Cullin added.

Libraries in the U.S. that are currently enhancing their services with the GoLibrary products include Contra Costa County (CA), Yuba County (CA), Westchester Library System (NY), Yorktown Community Library (NY) and Scarsdale Public Library (NY).

Headquartered in Indianapolis, Indiana, Evanced Solutions offers products and services for libraries of all types and budgets. These include event calendaring, registration, meeting room booking, summer reading management, staff scheduling and library materials vending solutions, all designed to better attract and engage the communities libraries serve.
