Customers Test Evanced Products and Win

INDIANAPOLIS, IN – February 10, 2009 — The first ever Evanced Bug Hunt contest was held December 1, 2008 through February 1, 2009.

As Evanced's products have evolved over the past nine years, they have become more and more adaptable to the customers' many and varied needs. As the software has grown more complex, so has the testing process. As a result, the company decided it needed a new approach to testing its software and who better to test it than Evanced's customers themselves? Fifteen library teams across the United States participated including:

- Manhattan Public Library (Kansas)
- York County Public Library (Virginia)
- Westerville Public Library (Ohio)
- Clearwater Public Library System (Florida)
- Coal City Public Library District (Illinois)
- Contra Costa County Library (California)
- Roselle Public Library (Illinois)
- Akron-Summit County Public Library (Ohio)
- East Fishkill Community Library (New York)
- Hartford Public Library (Connecticut)
- Fayetteville Free Library (Arkansas)
- Liverpool Public Library (New York)
- Johnson County Library (Kansas)
- Pasco County Library System (Florida)
- Clark Public Library (New Jersey)

The teams were given a set of instructions and asked to report bugs via Evanced's Online Support Forum. The first team to report a bug was given credit. Those with the most bugs were given their choice of prizes. First place included a tie between Manhattan Public Library (Kansas) and York County Public Library (Virginia). Runners up were Westerville Public Library (Ohio) and Clearwater Public Library System (Florida). The contest was so successful that Evanced is running a Summer Reader Bug Hunt Contest February through March 2009. For more details see the Evanced Solutions blog www.evanced.blogspot.com.
